Where we are

IITA R4D stations serve our scientists and partners across sub-Saharan Africa. (Map by IITA)

Agricultural R4D is vital to sustainable human development in sub-Saharan Africa. It helps to provide employment for more than 70% of the population and food for all, and assists in managing resources for food production. The provision of nutritious food is fundamental to human health, economic growth, and social stability.

IITA reaches approximately 85% of the national systems in the region with our research-for-development activities that address the needs of the poor and the vulnerable. For the last 45 years, IITA has delivered over 70% of the impact from CGIAR in the region. The Institute has achieved this impact by focusing on key tropical food crops, such as banana and plantain, maize, cassava, soybean, cowpea, tree crops, and yam.

IITA

The International Institute of Tropical Agriculture (IITA) is an international nonprofit organization created in 1967 and governed by a Board of Trustees. We work with partners in Africa and beyond to reduce producer and consumer risks, enhance crop quality and productivity, and generate wealth from agriculture.
